PRINCESS PATTERN

A daily guide to cruise activities

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK • WEDNESDAY, JULY 19, 2006 • SEA PRINCESS
Sunrise 4:51am • Sunset 9:45pm • Tonight's Dress: Smart casual

Welcome to Copenhagen

Think of Copenhagen and a dozen different impressions pass through your mind: half-forgotten fairy tales by Hans Christian Andersen. The charm and gaiety of Tivoli Gardens. Seventeenth-century copper-green roofs grace the skyline. And a uniformed Royal Guard protects the members of the oldest royal dynasty in all Europe.

Located on Sealand, the largest of Denmark's 400 islands, Copenhagen is home to nearly one-third of the country's five million people. Recorded history dates it from the time of the Vikings. And Copenhagen has survived plague, fire and Nazi occupation to emerge as one of Europe's most advanced and enlightened cities.

FROM THE NAVIGATOR

Once clear of her berth, yesterday afternoon, Sea Princess began her outbound transit of Oslo Fjord and Drobak Narrows. Once out of the fjord, the pilot was disembarked and we initially set a series of southerly course across Skagerrak towards Kattegat and our Destination Copenhagen. Around 06:00 we will begin the transit of the Sound which lies between the Swedish and Danish coasts, at its narrowest part the width of this passage is 2 miles. This channel is also the entrance to the Baltic sea.

At approx. 06:15 we will embark our local pilot and continue our navigation through the strait.

We expect to be all fast along side by 09:00.
