WELCOME TO COZUMEL, MEXICO

Cozumel was once a shrine to the Maya Moon Goddess, Ixchel, whom women flocked to in search of fertility. Cortes landed here briefly in 1519 and Henry Morgan, the English Buccaneer, used it as a base for piracy. Then for 300 years the island was largely uninhabited. Subdued echoes of its past emerge in the many crumbling Mayan ruins and in the spectacular sunken ships whose hulls slumber near reefs. Cozumel was rediscovered during World War II by American military diving teams in training for the Pacific arena. It was well chosen: the Palancar Reef is the fifth longest in the world, the second longest outside of Australia. The divers' enthusiasm reached Jacques Cousteau, and after his visit and subsequent blessing, Cozumel and the entire eastern shore of Quintana Roo and Belize began attracting scuba divers from around the world. The tourist industry got going in the 1960's, resulting in dozens of hotels, restaurants, boutiques and dive shops. Life centers around San Miguel and Scuba divers, congregate here, as do hundreds of cruise ship passengers for a day of shopping. Duty free shops line the Malecon, selling jewelry made of black coral, tortoise shell and an assortment of crafts from all over Mexico, particularly silver and pottery.

From the Navigator

At 7:00 am we expect to dock at the island of Cozumel. We will leave our berth at 2:00 pm and sail on various northerly and easterly courses along the island of Cozumel. After passing the northernmost point, Punta Molas, we will sail into the Caribbean Sea on a heading of 105 degrees towards the Cayman Islands.

Internet Center

How many times have you said "I really want to learn how to use the Internet", but just haven't had the time? Well, now is your chance. Your Internet Center Manager will be happy to help you log-on and give you a quick and simple lesson. You won't believe what you've been missing.

Food Ashore

Due to the Mexician Health Authority laws, you are not permitted to take any food items ashore in Cozumel.

Beach Towels

Just ask your Cabin Steward for a beach towel and he will gladly provide you with one. Please return it to him as he will be held responsible.

Say "I Do" All Over Again

Would you like to tell that special someone that you would marry them all over again? Why not do this while being pampered by the crew of the ms Maasdam on Half Moon Cay! For more information contact the Guest Relations Manager via the Front Office before Thursday.

Disembarkation Questionnaire

Please remember to turn in your questionnaire to the drop box placed outside the Front Office, Promenade Deck 7.

Deck Chairs

In fairness to your fellow guests, deck chairs may not be reserved at any time. Items left on the chairs for more than 30 minutes will be removed.
