CRUISE DIRECTOR SUSAN WOOD

Susan Wood's great, great grandfather was a Captain who was lost at sea in 1821. She's the second member of her family to work aboard ships and has been much more fortunate in keeping her head above water. A student of dance since the age of five, she eventually earned a spot on the British Dance Team representing her country worldwide. Spotted by a cruise ship director, she was swept off the dance floor and onto the seas as a dance instructor. After being seasick for two weeks, she vowed never to board a ship again. However, a short while later, she gained her sea-legs and was hooked. Leaving her dance studio in England, she spent the next four years teaching dance on ships before being tapped to become an assistant cruise director. Working for Holland America Line for the past twelve years, Susan was quickly promoted to cruise director and was the first woman ever to hold such a position within the fleet. Although she dispensed with her dancing shoes to enter the world of management, she never lost her zest for entertainment and is highly visible to guests both on and off-stage. Susan was raised in Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, 60 miles from the Scottish border. Her accent is a delightful blend of English and Scottish with a pinch of Norwegian, the remnants of a much earlier Viking time in northeast England. When not at sea, she spends time renovating her haunted castle located amidst the rolling hills of England.
